Here and There.

The following from the "Overseas Daily Mail" requires no words of mine. Premier Asquith speaking to the Tyne war workers says: "I saw a statement the other day that operations not only of our army, but of our allies were being crippled, or at any rate hampered, by our failure to provide the necessary ammunition. There is not a word of truth in that statement."

Also from the same paper there is a speech by Lloyd George in the House of Commons, in which he gives the following figures showing the increase of the output of ammunition. Taking the figures in Sept. as 20, Oct. 30, Nov. 50, Dec. 150, Jan. 180, Feb. 250, March 388. In the same speech he says that "He adhered absolutely to what he had said regarding drinking among workmen, he declared, but insisted emphatically that he had never gone beyond the accusation that a 'small minority' of workmen were implicated. "I can't be responsible for what other people say," he pleaded, and there were generous cheers.

Good for you "Toly," keep at it; but I hope for your sake you will not be called all the names that I have so far, and my list is still growing, and some day I may be tempted to publish these names just to show what people say about one if so stupid as to disagree with them. I wonder what the beer should be. Would you call it "Arguments for or against the Liquor Act," or say, "Temperance in language as well as in drink." However, Toly, I find the Act will not affect you or I so much as I at first thought, for we shall be able to ship the stuff just as cheaply from the Fernie brewery or Milwaukee, after paying the freight. Or if you prefer the Calgary brewery will ship to an agent outside the Province, who of course will be able to ship it back here again, and I don't believe they will raise the price either, for at present you can buy Calgary beer cheaper at the coast than you can here. What about class legislation, eh, what? For certainly the man who cannot find three or four dollars at once will have to go dry, but the others will be able to send for their weekly or fortnightly orders without any difficulty. I would give a tip to all who have money to invest, to buy railway stock, for my, won't it make a difference to the traffic.

I attended the address of Messrs. McRory and Morrow, on Sunday last, but did not find quite such a big crowd as I expected. There were one or two things which struck me, one speaker said "we moderate drinkers are selfish if we don't wish to give up our beer for the good of the country." Now, I wonder if it struck other people the same, but I don't believe there was one man on the platform who enjoyed his glass, so they are not giving up anything. The second point I would like to draw attention to was Mr. McRory's remarks about compensation, he seemed to find a difficulty in seeing why the license holders should be treated differently to the traders who suffer from the U.F.A. competition. He seems to forget that we grant a license to the hotels at all intents and purposes to carry on a monopoly in this town, and in most towns of this size to sell drinks, and practically it is an understood thing that as long as the licensee behaves himself, by keeping an orderly house, that the license will be renewed each year, otherwise he could not possibly afford to invest so much capital in such a business. Now in the matter of compensation, I cannot understand why you do not grant it, if it is done only for the sake of withdrawing opposition from the proposed bill; you really cannot call this a selfish argument from me, as I do not own a share in any hotel, brewery or distillery in this country. I will go further and say that if you will agitate for compensation in connection with the bill, I will vote for it, and I shall not be the only selfish one who would do the same. Thirdly, one speaker asked what we did with a hired man or any other man who came home drunk, did we fire him? Really, Mr. Speaker, just look round the town and see if you can see a man who has been treated in this manner, or even in finding a difficulty in getting a job. I have rather wondered myself if it was not considered rather an advantage to be a bit of a drunkard since I have been here. Certainly in that so called terrible drinking country called England, a man would get discharged instantly if found drunk during business hours, and would have great

Correspondence.

The Editor, Crossfield Chronicle.
Dear Sir,—As a humble supporter of the "Prohibition" movement I would like to express my hearty appreciation of "Toby's" letter, published in your last issue.

I hardly agree with all the sentiments expressed by "Toby," but that in no way lessens the pleasure I obtained from his letter. When "Toby" strikes the note of "profit" he is introducing one of the main reasons as to why we should support the Prohibition measure. It is indeed the vile adulteration and wilful destruction of human health that brands this traffic as injurious and criminal, and brings shame upon the civilization that permits it to exist.

This is a point that the active workers for the Liquor Act have apparently overlooked. Bravo! Toby! you have struck one blow for the cause, come again and help out the fight for victory on July 21st.

Yours truly,

PROHIBITIONIST.

War Will Not Interfere With Events of Edmonton Exhibition Association.

Edmonton Exhibition Association is in a class by itself, in that it has not permitted war conditions to interfere with any of the events put on annually on the Exhibition grounds. The Spring Race Meet May 22nd, 24th and 26th, promises to be as big an event as before, if not bigger.

Every day sees new horses added to those already there, and numbering well up to the hundred mark. The track has been kept in excellent condition, and from early morning to night the horses are working out in anticipation of actual contests. The horses include the fastest in Western Canada and the United States, and their trainers claim that all will start at the Spring Race Meet.

Excursion rates have been arranged on all lines of railway, and it is expected that these, with the holidays, will bring large crowds of visitors to supplement the throngs of Edmonton citizens who look forward to the Spring Race Meet as something too good to be overlooked.

The Edmonton races are patterned after the Woodbine races of Toronto, and the high standard of clean racing that has made the Woodbine famous Edmonton is endeavouring to sustain. With this in mind it has been decided all women to the grounds free.

The Mystery of the Ravenspurs

By Fred M. White

Ward, Lock & Co., Limited
 London, Melbourne and Toronto

The conversation proceeded fitfully, sometimes almost lively, upon lapsing into silence. It was said for these people to speak. The candle flickered outside the hall; they found it impossible to follow social or political life. Daily papers were read, but it was seldom that they were looked into.

The dinner came to an end at length, and then the family circle drew round the fire. Ravenspur was one of those big cold places where fire was always needed. Mrs. Gordon rots and was to the door. Her husband's eyes followed her. These two were grey and old before their time, but the flames of love still burned bright and clear.

"You will not be long, dear," Gordon Ravenspur said. "I am a sentimental remark in the ordinary way, but not in this place where the passing of a minute might mean parting for all time. Mrs. Gordon snuggled back upon her husband.

"I am going to bed," she said. "Never mind me, I feel sleepy."

The young people went apart sympathetically. He knew what his wife meant as if she had put her thoughts into words. She had been terribly upset over Vera and now that the danger was past a heavy reaction set in.

"Why should we sit here like this?" Geoffrey exclaimed. "Vera and Marion. I'll play you two a game of billiards. Come along."

Marion smilingly declined. She touched the back of Ravenspur's wasted hand.

"I am going to stay here just for a few minutes and take care of grandfather," she said. "Then I will go to bed. Give Vera twenty in a hundred, and I will bet you a pair of gloves that she beats you easily."

The young people went off together and in the excitement of the game other things were forgotten. They played well and Geoffrey had all his work cut out to beat her. Finally Vera ran out with a succession of brilliant flukes.

"Well, of all the luck!" Geoffrey cried. "Let's play another game here after that exhibition of yours I must have a cigarette. Wait for a moment."

The cigarette was not in their accustomed place. Geoffrey ran up the stairs to his bedroom, unlocked the door, and the dusky corridor on his return.

In the gallery all was dark and still, save for something that sounded like two figures in muffling velvet robes dancing together. It seemed to Geoffrey that he could actually hear them breathing after their exertions.

With a quickening, he stopped to listen. Surely somebody buried under many thick folds of cloth was calling for assistance.

"Who is there?" Geoffrey called. "Who are you?"

"Just under the Lolly portrait," came a stifled response. "If you don't mind."

The voice ceased. In that instant Geoffrey had recognized it as Aunt Gordon's voice.

Headless of danger to himself he reared down the corridor, his thin evening pumps making little or no noise on the polished floor. Nor had Geoffrey lived all these years for nothing. He could have found the spot blindfolded.

He could see nothing, but he could hear the struggle going on; then he caught the flash of something that looked like a blue diamond, if not a band was to be seen. Geoffrey caught at nothingness and grasped something warm and palpitating. He had the mysterious assailant in his grip; perhaps he held the cold assassin's heart. He heard footstep pattering along the corridor as Mrs. Gordon ran for assistance. He called out to her and she answered him.

She was safe.

That was a narrow escape," a hoarse voice said.

"Uncle Ralph!" Geoffrey panted. "How did you get here? And where has the fellow gone?"

"Was close at hand," Ralph said coolly. "A minute or two sooner and I might have saved Gordon's wife instead of your doing it. See, is there blood on this knife?"

He handed a box of matches to Geoffrey. The long carved Malay blade was dripping with crimson. But there were no signs of it on the floor.

"Let us follow him," Geoffrey cried eagerly. "He can't be far away."

But Ralph did not move. His face was expressionless once more. He did not appear to be in the least interested or excited.

"It is useless," he said. "In his dull, mechanical way he is following you as you are as blind as I am. There are things beyond your comprehension. I will follow him to tell what is happening below."

He began to feel his way to the stairs. Geoffrey followed him. "Are we never going to do anything?" the younger man exclaimed passionately.

"Yes, yes, Patience, lad! The day of reckoning is close at hand. I stand before you. But to follow your late antagonist is futile. You might as well try to beat the wind that carries away your hat on a stormy day."

Mrs. Ravenspur sat in the dining hall, pale, and trembling from head to foot. It seemed as if an ague had fallen upon her. Every now and then a short hysterical laugh escaped her, but it was not a laugh of merriment or joy. It was a laugh of pain, of despair, of fear.

And yet there was nothing to be done, nothing to be said; they could only look at her with moist eyes and a yearning sympathy that was beyond all words.

"It will pass," Mrs. Gordon said faintly. "I shall have our trial; and mine are no worse than the rest. Gordon is no better."

She passed up the stairs leaning on the arm of her husband. Time was wasted in vain. They were too significant. They were too significant. They were too significant.

He turned to Ralph again he was far off feeling his way along the room, feeling, feeling always for the clue to the secret.

CHAPTER XII.

Geoffrey is Put to the Test
 The house was quiet at last. When these mysterious things had first happened, fear and alarm had driven sleep from every eye, and many was the long night the whole family had spent, huddled round the fire till grey morn chased their fears away.

But as the inhabitants of a beleaguered city learn to sleep through a heavy bombardment, so had the Ravenspurs come to meet these horrors with grim tenacity. They were all upstairs now, behind locked doors, with a hope that they might meet again on the morrow. Only Geoffrey was up waiting for his uncle Ralph.

He came at length so noiselessly that Geoffrey was startled, and motioned to him that he should follow him without a word.

They crept like ghosts along the corridor until they reached a room with double doors at the end of the picture gallery. Generations ago this room had been built for a Ravenspur who had developed dangerous homicidal mania, and in this room he had lived virtually a prisoner for many years.

After they had closed the two doors, a heavy curtain was drawn over the inner one, and Ralph fumbled his way to the table and laid down a book.

"Now we can talk," he said quietly, but not loud. Understand that the matter is to be a profound secret between us; and that not a soul is to know of it; not even Vera."

"I have already given my promise," said Geoffrey. "There is no harm in again impressing the fact on your mind. Geoffrey, you are about to see the most important secret of your pluck and courage to the utmost."

Geoffrey nodded. With the experience of youth he was ready. "I will do anything you ask me," he replied, "and you can face any danger."

get at the bottom of this business."

"You are a good lad. Turn the lamp down very low and open the window. Have you done that?"

"Yes, I can feel the cold air on my face."

Ralph crossed to the window and, putting out his hand, gave the quaint mournful call of the owl. There was a minute's pause and then came the answering signal. A minute or two later a man's head and shoulders were framed in the open window. Geoffrey would have dashed forward, but Ralph held him back.

"Not so impatient," he said. "This is a friend of mine."

Geoffrey asked no questions, though he was puzzled to know why the visitor did not enter the castle by the usual way. At Ralph's request he closed the window and drew the heavy curtain up. The lamp was turned up again.

"This is my friend," said Ralph. "A fine young fellow, and one that you and I can trust. Geoffrey, this is my old friend, the Tchigorahy."

Geoffrey shook hands with Tchigorahy. To his intense surprise he saw that the face of the stranger was disfigured in the same way as that of his uncle. Conscious of this, his mind was as clear as a brook.

"My appearance startles you," he said. "Some day you will learn how your uncle and myself came to be both disfigured in this terrible way. That secret will be disclosed when the horror that haunts this house is revealed."

"Will it ever be lifted, sir?" Geoffrey asked.

"We can do so at any time," Tchigorahy replied in his deep voice. "You may be surprised to hear that we can place our hands on the guilty party at a moment's notice and bring the offender to justice. Your eyes ask me why we do not do so instantly. We refrain, as the detectives refrain from arresting one or two of the worst criminals, preferring to spread their nets till they have them all in their meshes. There are four people in this business, and we must take the lot of them, or there will be no peace for the house of Ravenspur. You follow me?"

The proffessor on a small middle-west day was a woman of great precision and extreme propriety. One day a reporter succeeded in getting her to type an item about "Willie Brown, the boy who was burned in the west and by a live wire."

On the following day the reporter found on his desk a printed slip asking: "Which is the west end of a boy?" It took only an instant to reply, "The end the son sets on, of course."

—Ladies' Home Journal.

An official memorandum regarding war orders states that at least ninety-two millions of dollars' worth of material and equipment has been ordered by the allies from Canada, and that this expenditure does not include that incurred on behalf of the Canadian contingents, which exceeds twenty-three millions. Seventy-two Canadian companies have been given orders for strategic, tactical and military equipment in making the various parts required. The orders placed with the United States amount to more than a billion dollars.

The Kaiser's Plans

Will Punish Emperor Joseph For Not Having Kept Him End up in the Conflict

The Press Bureau's official eye-witness at the British front sends a new version of German aims gleaned from captured German officers, who say that the Austrian empire is to be dismembered, part of it going to Italy and part of it to Germany. This is the price, according to these officers Austria must pay for the failure of her army.

It is said in addition by these men that Germany will insist upon the annexation of Belgium to a new German confederation, to include all German peoples and the Scandinavians. Antwerp, according to these views, which are pronounced with great assurance, is to be made an international port, and the whole of this scheme is to be brought about through the offices of the Pope.

"Conversation with captured officers and the better educated prisoners has thrown considerable light on the views of the general situation now held by the German army."

"It is freely admitted that Germany started the war, but opinion seems to be settling upon the intention to occupy Belgium permanently. The belief is that she would not have crossed the Meuse if England had remained neutral. The belief is that she would have advanced through Boulogne, Belgium and Luxembourg, thinking Great Britain would not intervene. The German army maintained that she desired no territory in Europe not already occupied by its own fighting people. It is admitted that Germany's strategic frontier in the Vosges must be improved."

"The most important point in the views now held is a frank admission that since the Austrians have failed so badly in the present war and have been isolated up by the armed strength of Germany she will have to pay for it and must bleed."

"The German army will hold that the Austrian empire will cease to exist. The Germans will give away some of its territory to Italy, and include the German speaking portion of the empire in the German empire, and also Luxembourg."

"The Germans will welcome the Dutch of Flanders to join themselves and Russia, and will insist on Belgium joining the German roll, Antwerp becoming an international port."

"There is to be a great central European confederation of the Germanic peoples formed, to include the Scandinavians. The Germans are based on the good offices of the Pope, though the necessity or this is regretted because it is not thought that the Pope's influence is compatible with the establishment of the pan-Austrian empire. These views are based on inspired and highly-colored newspaper accounts, and are not to be taken as the official communications."

New Floating Mine

It Has Many Advantages Over Those in Use by Other Nations

The British navy has developed a new type of mine, which, according to the Admiralty, is a new era in the branch of warfare. The German and French navies have not yet presented such a very difficult problem, because it has been comparatively easy to avoid mines by using their suspension tackle. The new British mine has no floats and no tackle. It can be ejected from a torpedo tube or incontinent thrown overboard. If desired, it can be set to rest on the sea floor until the minute chosen by those placing it, when it will come up, not to the surface, but to the proper depth at which to meet the rushing bows of a ship.

As soon as the mine, floating free, reaches a certain depth there is set up a series of movements which will put into operation a jet of propeller, and this promptly kicks the mine up to the surface, and then stops it until again called upon. It is not a mine easily caught in sweeping operations, as it progresses under water in a series of slow "leaps." However, reveal it, as it cannot leap beyond its fixed limit of buoyancy.

Many Butcher Shops Close
 Two thousand butchers' shops have been closed in England since the beginning of the war. The increased scarcity of meat and the effort in most households to economize closely, has been the cause for the decreased consumption of meat.

Probably more meat than ever before found its way into the British Isles, but a large proportion of it goes immediately into the hands of the government for supplying the soldiers a home and abroad.

The average retail butcher, according to trade journals, has decreased twenty per cent.

Every Frenchman met in uniform now wears a brassard on his arm to show he is an special duty. For it is a mark of shame not to be in service.

Horses or Gasoline

Craze For Gasoline Engines Fast Dying Out in the West

Saskatchewan farmers are apparently coming to the conclusion that gasoline tractive power is less economical than that supplied by animals. The Hon. W. R. McEwen recently stated that the Saskatchewan Investment Co. at Merrifield had discarded the six large engines they had in favor of oxen, 160 oxen being required to do the old work. At the Horse Breeders' convention held in Regina, the secretary in his report claimed that the craze for gasoline engines was fast dying out and that the use of horses was being reverted to. The result in this mixed farming in this province has received a considerable impetus.

The report of the Sheep Breeders' association also held in Regina showed there were 138,000 sheep in Saskatchewan in 1914, or about one to every five persons. The price realized for wool in 1914 was 17.6 cents as compared with 13 and 14 cents in 1912.

The outlook for increase in sheep production is favorable, the only trouble being dogs. It was decided to take up with the provincial government to see if all dogs in rural districts with the exception of those used on the farm for utility purposes could not be done away with. Over 1,000,000 dogs were produced in Saskatchewan in 1914, as compared with about 500,000 in 1913.

All Night With Asthma.—Everyone knows how attacks of asthma often keep the sufferer awake the whole night long. Morning fluids him wholly unfit for a day of business and his business must still be carried through. All this night suffering and lack of rest is due to the presence of the Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy, which positively does drive away the attacks.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon was asked what he thought of the outlook for the Republican party in 1916, and he answered with a story.

"A black man was arrested for horse stealing while I was prosecuting attorney in Vermilion county," he said. "And he was placed on trial after being fully indicted. When his day came, the judge said: 'I solemnly read the charge in the indictment to him. Do you guilty or not?' I asked:

"The black man said unhesitatingly in his chair: 'Well, boss, he finally said 'ain't dat the very thing they was about to try?'"

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than in any other. It has been put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be a disease of the past. It is now a disease of the present, and is being treated by the best of modern medicine, and by constantly taking local remedies, and by constantly taking local remedies, and by constantly taking local remedies.

Declaration of War Carried Two Years

Astonishing Revelation Made in the Case of International German

Testimony was brought out at the trial of the gulls against the steamer Kronprinzessin Cecilie which indicated that as far back as 1912 Germany was expecting war with France, Russia and Britain.

Captain Charles August Pollock, commander of the vessel, testified that when he took charge of her two years ago he received sealed envelopes from the former captain with instructions not to open it until he received a message signed "Siegfried," and purporting to say that somebody was sick. The message, he testified, was received at 10 o'clock on the night of July 31, when the ship was within 1,670 miles of Plymouth, and "Eberhart has suffered an attack of catarrh of the bladder—Siegfried."

On opening the sealed envelope, he said, he found a copy for the vessel in the message. According to the code the message read: "War has been declared by Britain, France and Russia; turn back." Siegfried was the code signature of the managing director of the North German Lloyd line.

Captain Pollock said the reason he did not return to New York or Boston was that he had intercepted messages from the British cruiser Essex to Halifax on his way back, and feared that the big ports would be watched by the British navy, putting him into Bar Harbor.

The suit was in the United States admiralty court and involved claims aggregating $1,500,000.

DOUBLE TRACK MILEAGE

Double Track Mileage of C.P.R. Exceeds That of All Canadian Railways Put Together

The Canadian Pacific Railway now has 1,420 miles of double track, which is a very great feat for the double track mileage of any other line in Canada, and exceeds that of all Canadian railways put together.

Abolition Drinking

Abolition drinking, now permanently banned in France, came home to the French soldiers after the Algerian war (1847-1849). The green devil soon pushed its way across the channel, for by 1850 the Newcomers' was written. It was a familiar drink in West End clubs.

The Way Out

Change of Food Brought Success and Happiness

An ambitious but delicate girl, after failing to go through school on account of nervousness and hysteria, found in Grape-Nuts the only thing that seemed to build up and furnish her the peace of health.

"From infancy," she says, "I have not been strong. Being ambitious to learn at any cost, I finally got to the High School but soon had to abandon my studies on account of nervous prostration and hysteria."

"My food did not agree with me, and I grew thin and despondent. I could not enjoy the simplest social affair for I suffered constantly from nervousness in spite of all sorts of medicines."

"This wretched condition continued until I found Grape-Nuts. The letters of those who had cases like mine and who were being helped by Grape-Nuts, induced me to try them."

"I had little faith, but procured a package, and after the first few days, I was peculiarly satisfied feeling that I had never gained from any ordinary food. I slept and rested better that night and in a few days began to grow stronger."

"I had new feeling of peace and restfulness. In a few weeks, to my great joy, the headaches and nervousness left me and I became bright and hopeful. I resumed my studies and later taught in the high school."

"I have the most perfect satisfaction that I had never gained from any ordinary food. I slept and rested better that night and in a few days began to grow stronger."

Name given by Canadian Postcard Co. "Vivian" on the "The Road to Wellville" in 1914. "There's a Reason."

Varieties of Corn to Grow

Proper Maturity is Essential to High Quality Ensilage

An investigation conducted by the Seed Bureau shows that about sixty so-called varieties of corn are grown for ensilage in Ontario and Quebec, and many farmers do not know what varieties are being used in districts where they will not mature one year in five to the glazing of the grain which is the necessary condition to make sweet silage. Some ordinary feed corn imported from the Central and Southern States is used for seed. Most of this is of a late variety entirely unsuited to Canadian conditions, and is often injured by heating.

The following recommended varieties of corn are arranged in order of their maturity: Quebec Yellow, Longellow, Sudford or North Dakota, Compton's Early, Golden Glow, Early White Cap, Wisconsin No. 7. In selecting varieties for northern districts, later-maturing, heavier yielding varieties may be planted on a warm, sandy soil than on a cold clay soil. The proper maturity is essential in high quality ensilage, and this should be aimed at even although an increased acreage is needed to give the desired quantity of material.

Spring Reminders Of Rheumatism

Raw, Damp Weather Starts the Pain, But the Trouble Lies in the Blood

Spring weather is bad for rheumatic sufferers. The changes from mild, cold, raw, rainy winds start the aches and twinges, or in the more extreme cases, the tortures of the trouble going. But it must be borne in mind that it is not the weather that causes rheumatism.

The trouble is in the blood—the changeable weather merely starts the pain. The only way to get over the trouble and to cure it is through the blood. The poisonous rheumatic acids must be removed. Liniments and rubbing may give temporary relief, but cannot possibly cure the trouble. More deeply rooted—harder to cure. There is just one speedy cure for rheumatism—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They act directly on the impure, acid-saturated blood. They purify and cleanse the blood.

CROSSFIELD, ALTA., MAY 13, 1915.

Correspondence.

To the Editor, Crossfield Chronicle;

Sir:—I have read with interest those letters written by "Baw", "Citizen" and Mr. Morrow, dealing with the subject "Prohibition."

If you will allow me space in your valuable paper, I would like to say a few words in favor of prohibition, and give one reason why I intend to vote in its favour on July 21st.

A friend says why? Because I know the evil effect liquor has on those who use it, more especially on the wives and children of those who use it to excess. My friend says yes, but does that hurt you or me? Physically No, but I have a natural fellow feeling for my fellow man. I would like to do something to remedy the cause, you've helped lots of chaps who have been down and out—you understand what I mean.

I know, and that's all right, but look here. If a man wants to drink, get drunk and get into a mix up, the police will take care of him, its none of our funeral.

I can't see it that way friend. Do you mean to tell me, that it's all right for a man to get drunk on the money that should buy bread and clothing for his wife and family, and in many cases abuse them after starving them.

I know—it's fierce all right—but the only way I see to do, is to put him into jail—give him hard labour with about 100 lads.

Yes, and when he gets out 9 times out of 10, he gets drunk goes home and abuses his wife and family again.

Well my friend says put him back in again give him some more of the lash.

Yes if there was no other remedy, it would be far better to keep him in jail wouldn't it?—that's the way they punish a thief—it keeps him from stealing while he is in jail. There is no way possible that I can see to keep a thief from stealing only by keeping him in jail. When we know a man to be a thief we don't leave money laying around where he can get it easily do we?

Well I guess not.

Sure we don't, but we sell a man booze to get drunk on, and abuse his wife and family, don't we? and nobody says a word.

Well, what are we going to do about it?

Why grasp the only opportunity that has been given us to help our fellow man to rise—the man whom we are responsible for—the man who was once a respected citizen (and can be again.) We caused his down fall and caused his wife and family to suffer.

I don't see how.

Well, hav'n't we signed a hotel liquor license application turn some time,--we did it without a thought--it was customary to do so.--We were the cause of the temptation being thrown in the man's way--we are worse than he if we do not try to remedy our mistake, by voting in favour of closing the bar, it will be a strong foothold towards doing away with the manufacture of liquor in the near future.

This is one of my reasons for voting for "Prohibition," and as there are very many more good reasons for the same. Mr. Editor, and many persons who can deal with the subject in a more able way than I, it would be interesting to read their reason for voting for "Prohibition."

Thanking you,

I remain,
Sincerely yours,
G. W. BOYCE.

Excuse me Mr. Editor,
I fear I'm rather slow.
To narrate the dance at Inverlea.
About two weeks ago.

But somehow things will happen -- You know his all our fair!
Last week my pen it wouldn't write,
Till of course it was too late.

Now, in my fancy, I'll take you
To a pretty little school
Where pointers hang so carelessly
'(Except when 'one breaks the rule')
We all arrived in lots of time,
The floor with sets soon filled,
And we danced through the hottest dance.

Not one of us feeling chilled.
The music for these was played by --
---But, why need I go on,
To introduce the violinist
When, of course, you know 'twas

The floor was successfully managed
By George M., from the Willow
Spring.
He called the perplexing quadrilles
With as easy an air as a king.

Well, about twelve we halted,
And all felt exceedingly hot,
And knew lemonade and cake
Would certainly touch the spot.

So we sat down on the decks by the wall
As hungry as we could be,
But not very long, for soon,
Around came the dainty tea.

And quite soon after supper
George's "Stetson" passed around,
And the chink chased itself in the hat
With a merry little sound.

Then recitations followed,
And after a few dances more,
We all agreed to "Home, Sweet home."

With thoughts of a pleasant snore.
So thanks to violinist and manager,
And thanks for that dainty "crub."
But if I close I would say, Three shouts

For the "Inverlea Baseball Club."
